Early Opposition to Railroads

Ameterdam (N. Y.) Democrat.

When the Central Railroad was in its infancy the company experienced they heard the evening train coming west, they would put on the hand-car just as near ahead of the train as they dared, and run ahead of the train into the station; but between the hand car and the train the track would be literally strewn with stones, rails, and all manner of obstructions, which were thrown down from the heights above, so that the train would have to stop to clear the track (each train carried men for that purpose), and then pro-ceed at a snail's pace into the station.

Then again the tracks would be piled with huge heaps of straw, and the engineer would stop and find nothing out straw. It was usually thought the straw business was only a scare, but about the first time he attempted to run through without stop-ping he found a huge boulder in the center. Thus matters went on from bad to worse; an attempt was made to burn one of the company's bridges near this village, This was so highly criminal, and it was made so hot for some persons that hostilities ceased.

Upon one occasion, George Cox, he with his brothers Tom and Max well, were well-known up and down the valley as locomotive engineers, was watching the track near Tribe's Hill with a shotgun, with instructions to shoot the first man he saw placing any obstructions on the track. It was quite dark, and at a short distance from him he saw two men carry something targe and place it on the track. His first impulse was to shoot. and he hauled up, but he hated to take human life, and thought he would steal upon them and see who they were. He did so, and found that they were two travelers who had come from the canal with their chest to take the train, and being tired had set down to Cardinal Newman.

Mr. Froude says of Cardinal Newman in his famous days at Oxford: "Newman's mind was world wide. Nothing was too large for him, noth ing too trivial, if is threw light upon the central question, what man really was and what was his destiny. He was careless about his personal pros-pects. He had no ambition to make a career or to rise to rank and power Still less had pleasure any seductions for him. His natural temperament was bright and light; his senses, even the commonest, were exceptionally delicate. I was told that, though he rarely drank wine, he was trusted to se the vintages for the college cellar. He could admire enthusiastically any greatness of action and character, however remote the sphere from his own. Gurwood's 'Dispatches of the then. Newman had been reading the book, and a friend asked him what he thought of it. 'Think ?' he said, 'it makes one burn to have been a sol-dier." He seemed always to be better sation than any one else who was present. He was never condescending with us, never dictatic or authorative; but what he said carried conviction along with it. When we were wrong, he knew why we were wrong, and exhe set us right. Perhaps his supreme merit as a talker was that he never tried to be witty or say striking things. Ironical he could be, but not ill-natured. Not a malicious anecdote was ever heard from him. Prosy he could not be. He was lightness itself --the lightness of elastic strength-and he was interesting because he never talked for talking's sake, but cause he had something real to say.' French Railways.

N. Y. Sup.

The extraordinary increase in the receipts of the French railways in 1880 is naturally the subject of sincere 1890 is naturally the subject of sincere rejoicing in the newspapers. The augmentation for that year reached noless a sum than 114,000.000 francs. The progress of the railways during the last four years is worthy of examination. In 1877 the total receipts were 845,000,000 francs: in 1878, the exhibition was 905,000,000 francs. hibition year, 905,000,000 francs; in 1879 the increase was less marked; but last year the amount registered was no less than 1,028,000,000 francs. The -increasing wealth of France indicates an amount of prosperity which has never been even approached under any other form of government.

It appears, says the Va. Chronicle, that after all the widow and family of John Brown, of Harper's Ferry fame, are by no means so hard up as the San Francisco Chronicle has represented, Coroner Coan was at once notified and and that they resent the public parade of their alleged poverty made by that enterprising journal. From remarks made by the gushing Chronicle's esteemed contemporaries, we are led to infer that there is a pretty widespread belief that the Chronicle has resurrected the late Brown more for the purpose of using his remains as a fertilizer on its subscription list than out of any generous regard for the welfare of the defunct's tamily. Indeed, it seems to be believed by the Chronicle's esteemed contemporaries that if it could gain five hundred new subscribers by the operation it would subscribers by the operation it would of Sunol, Alameda county, was willingly consent to the transfer of the drowned in a fountain-basin on April immortal part of John Brown from heaven to hell.

BURKE Vs. BUNANZAS.

(Special to the Gazette

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12, 1881. The Examiner this morning publish es an account of a compromise of the famous Bonanza suits, brought by money in the State School Fund was John H. Burke against the Bonanza hence the suit. A jury trial will be derived from the proceeds of the sale firm and aggregating about thirty five had, and is set for to-morrow at 10 of lands under grants from the United million dollars. The register of the Superior Court shows that all of the said suits with the exception of one recently decided have been dismi-sed by consent of the parties thereto. These entries and signatures were made in the band writing of Attorneys for defendant and plaintiffs and appear upon the register in au informal and itlegal manner.

As the Clerk of the Court should have made the entries and no papers having been filed containing an ac count of the proceeding as required by law, it is understood that this has been done against the wish of other stockholders' plaintiffs.

One of the stockholders, Peter Chrystol, has brought the matter to the at tention of Judge Sullivan, who has made an order that parties to the suit shall show cause why the dismissal shall not be annulled, and Chrystol is allowed to intervene. As soon as the the attorneys heard of Chrystol's action they yesterday filed an action in proper form. Mr. Holladay, one of the bank's attorneys, states that Squire P. Dewey, who stood behind Burke, was discouraged because whatever money was gained by the mining suit recently decided would have to pass through Flood's hand-, and given the matter un.

Dewey declined to be interviewed. The Examiner considers the proceedings conclusive proof that a bargain between the parties was made without reference to to the rights and interests of the stockholders, and doubtless Burke got handsomely paid for his compromise.

Too Many Lawyers and Too Many Fees Albany Law Journal.

The rock that the legal profession are in most danger of coming to wreck on is that of excessive charges. There PHYSICIANS, CLERGYMEN, AND is a continual low growling in the community on this subject. The following in an English law newspaper does not exaggerate the matter:"There are certain well known firms of solicitors who can never be got to render a statement; they are perpetually applying for checks on account, and generally have the faculty of asking for these at some critical time in the procedure, when they know the litigant cannot help paying in order that his case may go on. Other solicitus punish the inquisitiveness of any who may wish for a detailed bill of co-ts by making it out to an extept vastly in excess of the round sum originally demanded." It is notorious that the charges are altogether out of proportion to the time given, the work given or the consideration received, and all kinds of vexatious obstacles are thrown in the way of any who seek to effect a reform in this respect. The fact is, that the ranks of the legal profession are overcrowded, and are being added to year by year to an extent which the public interests by no means require Yet the exclusiveness that obtains with regard to methods of procedure, and the stringent rules imposed upon Office, 35 Murray St., New York all members of the craft, prevent that me competition which exists in all other trades. "Ouida" is on the shady side of fort and Lucy Hooper says she shows it in her looks. "She has cut her hair short—that 'amber hair' of which she was once so proud, and which she used to wear falling in a loose mane down her back, though elaborately coiffed in front. Its amber is alloyed with silver now. The famous novelist drives about Florence in a lofty drag, holding the reins herself, and driving with such recklessness and lack of due precaution that she lately ran her steeds straight into a haywagon. In olden days she used to go about Florence on foot, accompanied by a train of fourteen dogs of various dimensions, that kept their mistress fully employed in settling their quar-rels and in keeping them out of mis-chief. The canne train is now diminished to some two or three individuals, but, as may be seen in her recent novels, Ouida is still very fond of dog."

And dogs always took after her. Indeed, she could extemporize a dog show in twenty minutes any time.
